Global Family Change

A few weeks ago Hans-Peter Kohler (PI) and Frank Furstenberg (Co-PI) embarked on a journey to better understand the complex ways in which families are changing across the world. Global Family Change (GFC) is an NSF funded project that will explore how families change on a global scale and will build a wealth of data to share. If you weren't able to make it to Luca Maria Pesando's talk "Global Family Change: The Reshaping of Society's Most Fundamental Institution with Development" last week you are in luck! The presentation, followed by a lively discussion, is now available on our YouTube channel.

Google Scholar Profiles

Google Scholar provides a simple way to broadly search for scholarly literature. From one place, you can search across many disciplines and sources: articles, theses, books, abstracts and court opinions, from academic publishers, professional societies, online repositories, universities and other web sites. Google Scholar profiles are searchable by using the hidden menu icon in the top left corner of the google scholar window (three horizontal lines). Later this year Google Scholar profiles will be linked on the PSC website. We encourage you to create one and ask for help if you need it. For more information about metric details and how to make your own scholar profile visit the Penn Libraries Google Scholar guide.

Poverty in the American South

Regina Baker will be speaking 10.10.17 from 6-7pm at World Cafe Live as a part of the Penn Science Cafe series. In this talk, Baker will address the reasons for this regional disparity and why, as a nation, Americans should care. Drawing on her research on the South, Baker will discuss the role of demographic, economic, political and racial factors in understanding poverty in the context of place. She will also touch on the uncertainty of future safety nets for America's most vulnerable populations in the current political climate. More information about the Penn Science Cafe series and this talk here.
